CAPTURE JUAREZ DENIES ATTACK

UPON PRISONER

Garibaldi and his force of rebels, who had

Earlier in the day had caused destruction by hurling dynamite bombs, were ordered by General Orozco to destroy all the liquor in the city.

Desperate fighting continued for some time after Navarro's retreat and fifty volunteer defenders, who had been fighting in the federal ranks, were taken prisoners near the city jail, where the last stand of those covering the retreat was made.

A message to the Madero headquarters in Mexico City, dated 30th November, from Caceres Grande had arrived at Banche, eleven miles south.

Colonel Bahago, with federal reinforcements, was reported at the rebel headquarters to be at Suta, 154 miles south, and with no prospects of getting here for a week.

The fighting in Jimera lasted all night, flames from houses and houses lighting the field of battle.

With the coming of dawn the fire be-

A number of immature refugees from Leningrad arrived during the night and found shelter in the abandoned U.S. military trenches. The firing was heard about 10 miles from the city and a detachment of American men went to the scene to investigate. They found about 100 miles away from the city, the rebels had been seen by the rebels' commanders. Little has been heard by the Americans, but they have wrecked stores and saloons, and have been seen to be looting the stores. The reason of the rebels has been great holes in the walls of houses. Furniture has been used for fuel. The rebels have been seen to be other people, but have been protected ever possible.

Americans Guard Border.
The American troops patrolling the border were relieved at dawn. Colonel Steever, the commander, like practically all the residents of El Paso, had no sleep last night. He sat up in his tent while the townspeople crowded the houses watching the flames rising in Juarez and the twinkling fires in Madero's camp. The work of the Red Cross physicians and nurses is confined to-day to this middle border, all having retired from Juan when notified that the general attack would begin at once. On their return here they stated that even the most conservative estimate would fix the total dead in yesterday's fighting at 100 and the wounded at from 200 to 300.

Many of the wounded have been brought across the river. The women of El Pinar are busy making bandages. At least 100 men of the wounded being cared for there. One shot on American soil by a bullet. Gustavo Madero, brother of the rebel commander, noticed the local authorities today that he would pay personally for the care of all wounded. During the morning he was in a conference with his brother by telephone. At 6:40 a. m. fire broke out on the eastern side of Juarez. These flames

Several federal loud explosions were attributed to federal mines set to halt the advance of the rebels. Shortly after midnight the flames, which died down with the burning of the stockade, which had been set on fire by the bomb, broke out afresh. It is reported that the Mexican Central Railroad passenger station, the Mexican Northwest freight depot and the city market place were in flames. No effort was made to distinguish them by either Federals or rebels.

Federals Lose Heavily.

The Federals are reported to have red heavy losses, but no accurate figures can be obtained. Colonel Stevens, commanding the American troops in this city, stated some of the rebel wounded brought to this city. None of them are Americans, although it is reported that Former Prisoner Thomas McTigue of the Laguardia street police station told the witnesses stand today in the Municipal Court and denied that he stood by and allowed another officer to assault John Costello in a cell at the station house on the night of February 23, 1939. McTigue is being sued for $2,500 by Costello as an accessory.

McTigue admitted that he was brought guilty of manslaughter and dismissed by the police commission.

"I did not strike Costello or allow any other officer to do so that night," testified McTigue. He is now a grocer at No. 213 Columbus road, Dorchester.

Put Prisoners in Cell.

"I was at my home when Costello was arrested for drunkenness that night. When I went to the station house I was placed on duty. I was one of the four officers who went down to bring the four prisoners (prisoners to have been taken later). I took the boys down to the cell. After prisoners were taken the same time the officers and I took the prisoners back and released them all in cell No. 13."

"The other officers were Bowser, Callahan and Capelle. The dream was to get all the prisoners in cell No. 13 was so as to make it more convenient when I was Former Patrolman Thomas McTighe of the Lagrange street police station told the witness stand today in the Municipal Court and denied that he stood by or allowed another officer to assault John Costello in a cell at the station house on the night of February 23, 1919. McTighe is being sued for $2,000 by Costello as an accessory.

McTighe admitted that he was found guilty of untruthfulness and dismissed by the police commissioner.

"I did not strike Costello or allow another officer to do so that night," testified McTighe. He is a grocer at 1000 North Dearborn.

MISS BEATRICE LIDDELL

It is claimed on behalf of Miss Beatrice Liddell that she has the most perfect figure ever subjected to the tape in Boston, and while Dr. Dudley A. Sargent, Harvard University does not make a such strenuous statement in her behalf, she has found by measurements that she ranks among the "perfect women" of the athletic type who have been single tested.

ment Bianchi a jury pool returned for his declaration wished to present for the consideration of the jury. Among these was bloody towel bearing finger prints of the murderers, who had coolly washed their hands in the apartments of the Coccolos after murdering Signora Coccolo in her bed. Another greswome article was the blood-stained and pierced silk night robe which had been worn by the dead woman.

She is English and Yorkshire at the same time. She was born at Manchester on the 12th of January, and since childhood has been a staid and efficient dancer. What her profession will accomplish in physical culture is very well demonstrated by this charming member of the English Fony Ballet now appearing at the Metropolitan Theatre, London. She was always supposed to give her form as a model for a sculptor. She is a skillful swimmer. This raises again the question whether swimming is not the one kind of exercise which lends to women the most perfect physical development.

from the shock of discovering his wife dead on his return home with two friends whom Mrs. Nudelman had invited to dinner.

When Nudelman and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Levens of No. 52 Spring street, Houston, arrived at the house, Mrs. Nudelman did not come to the door to greet them. When she did not respond to their merry calls, Nudelman searched the house

For her. Newsham entered the girl's bedroom and saw her lying dead on the bed. A girl's body, cold and stiff, which was a woman's mouth, revealed the cause of death. The medical examiner pronounced the case one of suicide.

"No," replied McTigue. "I did not strike any of them and I did not see any."

Q—Did you open the cell door and ask any of the other officers to go and see any of the prisoners? A—No, I did not.

Q—Did one of the other officers say to you, "Will you let me go and let him play A—No.

Q—Did you open the cell door at any other time that day except the one when these prisoners were brought up again to have their statements taken and the second time when they were placed in the cell? A—No.

Q—Did you see any blood on Costello's face when he was leaving the cell to go to the hospital? A—No.

Sergeant Blano of the City Prison and Patrolman McAliff, who drove the van that took Costello to the hospital, testified with blood when he arrived at the City Prison from the Lagrange street station.

SUICIDE IN CENTRAL PARK NOT ROGER

The fear felt that Jacob Crowninshield Rogers, a wealthy Salem real estate man and a brother of Mrs. "Tom" Pierce, had committed suicide in Central Park, New York, was dissipated to-day by George Wheatland, Rogers' brother-in-law, who stated that he had talked with Rogers over the telephone last night. Rogers left his apartment for New York last week, giving two addresses at which he might be found in New York. He could not be found at either of them last night. The description of the man found in Central Park, wearing a raincoat with the initials "R. E. Rogers" on the inside were the same as those of Rogers' brother. Wheatland heard of this last night and called Rogers on the telephone. He located his brother in a guest house, Long Island City, where he is now.

EIGHT ACTORS DEAD IN MUSIC HALL FIRE

EDINBURGH, Scot., May 10.—Eight bodies have been recovered to-day from the ruins of the Empire Music Hall, which was burned last night. The bodies so far identified are those of the "Great Lafayette" and two members of his company: Alice Dale, who impersonated the Teddier Midget, and Joe Coster.

What her profession will accomplish in physical culture is very well demonstrated by this charming member of the English Pony Baller now appearing with Montgomery and Stone. Swimming has also helped to give her a form which would make her very much desired by sculptors for a model. She is a skillful equestrian. This raises again the question whether swimming is not the one kind of exercise which lends to women the most perfect physical development.

The Harvard basketball team after its victory over Vermont at the University of Vermont campus.

Fled this afternoon at 4 o'clock, and as the Amherst boys defeated Harvard next year it to I, there is something scheduled to be doing today in the way of a small celebration. Harvard has been here last week when Vermont almost got away with the scalp, and the school was awakened from the lethargy in which it seemed to have fallen during the struggle with the Green Mountain boys.

Amherst has not had a very successful season this year, having lost six games, in five days. The majority

"It is unfortunate that Detroit has secured such a lead in the American League, but when that team comes East I believe that it will be checked, and that the race will then tighten up."
